What is a total hip replacement?

Total hip replacement is a surgical procedure where the worn out surfaces of the hip are replaced with man-made components.

Over time, cartilage that cushions the bones can wear away, cause pain and discomfort, and make simple activities like walking difficult or even unbearable.

A hip replacement can reduce or eliminate pain, allow easier movement and restore independence.

Who should get a hip replacement?

Hip replacement surgery may be considered for individuals suffering from arthritic hip pain that severely limits daily activities. It is only recommended after careful examination and diagnosis of your particular joint problem, and only after more conservative measures such as exercise and physiotherapy have proven ineffective.

How long will I spend in hospital?

With improvements in surgical techniques and post-operative care, it is now common for patients to be able to go home quite quickly. At The Royal Orthopaedic Hospital, we aim to support the majority of patients to go home within 48 hours (post surgery). Of course every patient is different, but we aim to help you recover quickly and regain your independence as quickly and efficiently as possible.

How successful is hip replacement?

Hip replacement is recognised as one of the most successful procedures in all of medicine. In England and Wales, over 160,000 people have their knees or hips replaced each year.

What is the recovery period like?

Recovery can vary from person to person, but most people will need to use a walking aid for a few weeks after their surgery. More active pursuits can be resumed in as few as 10 to 12 weeks. Your surgeon can advise you on specific questions about recovery.

How painful is the surgery?

You will experience some discomfort after surgery, but be assured we will do everything we can to keep you as comfortable as possible.

Pain after hip replacement surgery varies from person to person but modern medications and improved anesthetic techniques greatly enhance our ability to control pain and discomfort after surgery.

What are the risks?

Hip replacement is a common surgery and in the majority of cases there are no complications. However, it is a major surgery and like any major surgery there are some risks to consider:

- Blood clots
- Infection
- Implant loosening
- Fractures
- Nerve or blood vessel damage
- Hip dislocation
- Change of leg length

Your surgeon and healthcare team will take great care to minimise the risk of these and other complications. Keep in mind that complications are rare, but they need to be understood by you and your family. Your surgeon will be happy to answer any questions.
